Chapter 1 by Kaitlin

Of course this happens to you. "There's this really cool tree house in the woods," you're friends had said. "Just follow the trail," they said. What they HADN'T said, however; was that path split apart multiple times. You were tiered, hungry, and had a terrible headache. You pulled a protein bar out of your bag (the one time your mothers insistence on healthy snacks at all times had actually paid off), unwrapped it quickly, and started chewing. You were pretty deep into the woods near your house, and had no idea how to get back home. This was the third fork in the path you had encountered. Before you were three paths. One led into sunlight trees, the other into a clearing, and one to a dark part of the forest. "Oh hell naw." You thought. "I ain't going anywhere near that dark path." Then again, you had read enough Grimm fairy tales to be skeptical of the tempting, pleasant path. Decisions, decisions...

Chapter 3 by invisiblebird

As none of the paths lead north, you wander off the beaten track into the gloom of the woods. You hope you have made the right decision.
